2. Angelo King International Center

Established in 1999 out of the complementary goals of its two founding institutions, De La Salle University and the Angelo King Foundation, the DLSU–Angelo King Institute merges its founding institutions’ drive for research excellence, policy relevance and overriding concern for poverty alleviation. Supported by a worldwide network of donors and partners, the Institute has established a niche in the area of research by integrating economic and business studies, and by combining macro and micro perspectives. Since its establishment in 1999, the Institute has been undertaking research projects in the areas of (a) industrial restructuring and development in the Philippines, (b) global and regional production networks, (c) agricultural marketing and trade, (d) investments in agricultural research and development, (e) family business issues, (f) cost analysis in higher education institutions, (g) managing risks and opportunities of financial liberalization and integration, and (h) corporate governance and banking. It has hosted several seminars and roundtable discussions involving lawmakers, government officials, businessmen, labor leaders, academics, and representatives of civil society.

3. Orchid Garden Suites

The Orchid Garden Suites was built in 1935 by Philippine Supreme Court Justice Antonio Villa-real as a home for his family. Facing what used to be beautiful Harrison Park, the area was literally the Park Avenue of its time where the city's elite built mansions. It was designed by Philippine National Artist for Architecture, Pablo Antonio in his own brand of Art Deco.

Damaged in the Liberation of Manila at the end of the Second World War, it was faithfully restored for the family by Architect Antonio. Subsequently, it served as a home for many interesting personalities and even the Russian and Indonesian embassies. In 1995, the family converted it into the Orchid Garden Suites. In 2006 it was nominated for the UNESCO Asia-Pacific Awards for Cultural Heritage Preservation. Our respect for heritage and history doesn't end there. In 2014, we acquired on long-term lease the adjacent Legarda home also built in 1935 and restored it to serve as our new coffee shop and restaurant.
