This study reports on the dominant impression of the public about the recent fashion show staging of Bench called, The Naked Truth. Since the main objective of this study was to find out the honest opinion of people about the event, the most dominant online means of expressing thoughts were chosen: Twitter, Instagram, blogs, and online news articles. The data of the study consist of 2,848 tweets (approx. 27, 760 words), 142 Instagram posts (approx. 3,089 words), and 12 blog and online news article entries with approximately 2000 words each. Using Dimson, et al.'s (1999) influence of media theory, Frias et al.'s (2000) media exposure theory, and Wykes and Gunter's (2005) media representation theory, the data were classified and were analyzed. There are two general classifications of the results: English and Tagalog comments. From these two, they were further classified into positive, negative, and neutral. From these, the comments were further classified according to form - whether one-word or phrases. From the forms, the comments were further analyzed looking at the structure: whether nouns, adjectives, verbs and others for one-word comments; or whether noun-noun, noun-adjective, noun-verb, adj-noun or adv-adj-noun, and so on for the phrases. Results from this study show that the general public have a positive diposition towards The Naked Truth – that is towards the actual show itself and the models.

Key Words: descriptive language, reviews, models, media, The Naked Truth, representation

1 INTRODUCTION

1.1 Background of the Study

Body image is considered as one of the most controversial topics to date. It has specifically been linked with the media, stating how the media affects thoughts, perceptions, and portrayals of body image. A number of studies and research have tackled the effects of media on body image, regardless if these effects are positive or negative (e.g. Manasia, 2002; Agliata & Tantleff-Dunn, 2004; Achtenberg, 2006; James, 2013); most studies have tackled the negative side of the media's effect on body image. Some studies deal with the perceptions, and portrayals of different individuals with regards to their body image (e.g. Blaha, 2006; Shaller, 2006; Poorani, 2012).

More recently, an event entitled "The Naked Truth" was showcased by Bench, a famous retail brand, that resulted into mixed reviews from the audience. Based on the reviews of the event, most of the audiences deemed it controversial and not appropriate for it violated the values being practiced by the Filipino people. The reviews are composed of descriptive language aimed at the actual event and the models, both male and female.

The Naked Truth is a fashion event that was held in the Mall of Asia Arena last September 20, 2014. It was by famous retail brand Bench to showcase their denim and underwear line. Relatively, the show also featured famous stars and models in the Philippines and some from other countries. Bench is a famous clothing brand founded and established in 1987 by Chinese-Filipino entrepreneur, Ben Chan.

Moreover. much of the motivation for this study comes from the fact that the researchers are Communication Arts and Advertising Management majors, and this course requires them to think of a topic that is related to their course. Second, the researchers observed that much of the descriptive language present in the reviews of "The Naked Truth" were aimed the models; at more importantly the viewers or the people aware of the show were the ones critiquing the models and the ones giving the reviews through online articles, blogs, Twitter and Instagram, etc. Most studies about body image focus the different on effects.

portrayals, or perceptions in the media discussing how these effects. portrayals, or perceptions dictate the ideals of an individual when it comes to his or her body image (e.g. Manasia, 2002; Agliata & Tantleff-Dunn, 2004; Achtenberg. 2006; Blaha. 2006;Shaller, 2006; Poorani, 2012; James, 2013). The researchers felt the need to study how the models of "The Naked Truth" are presented based on the descriptive language present in the reviews of the event. In other words, the researchers are to study on the expectations of society of how a model should be - that is how a model should appear or should look like.

1.2 Review of Related Literature

As mentioned earlier, a lot of studies and researches have tackled the relationship between media and body image. Although not all studies tackled the relationship of the two, many of these studies focused on the effects of media on body image.

Some studies related the effects of media with parents and peers, where it was found that mothers, peers, and the media are perceived to encourage females to lose weight while fathers are perceived to provide different feedback to boys and girls alike (McCabe & Ricciadelli, 2001). In the study of Manasia (2002), she examines how the media influences the perception of women with their own body image. She reviews the studies of other researchers with regards to the effects of media on the body image of women. Some of these studies include: King et al., where the women different estimations of (concerned and non-concerned with body image) on the body size of celebrities (thin and heavy) were found; Lavine et al., where women were shown sexist and non-sexist advertisements, and found that those who watched the sexist ones desired to be thin than those who watched nonsexist ones; Cattarin et al., where women who were shown videotapes of bias towards thinness were found to be distressed; Pinhas et al., where women who were shown images of fashion models were found to feel anger; Lavin & Cash, where women exposed to appearance-related stereotypes perceived their own body image less favorably. Based on the findings, she concludes that mass media affects a woman's social acceptability. In some studies, it was found that mass media is believed to be a pervasive force in shaping physical appearance ideals (Agliata & Tantleff-Dunn. 2004). Other studies deal with the media's influence on adolescents, where it was found that media had the most influential effect on the students' perspectives of body image (Acthenberg, 2006). In relation to studies mentioned, a study by James (2013) found that society will always have standards that become harder and harder to achieve as long as women conform to these standards.

As mentioned earlier, most studies deal with the relationship of media and body image. Huebscher (2010) found that an adolescent girl's self-esteem was linked to a lean body image. She also found that family and peer relationships help shape how an adolescent girl perceives her own body image, a claim supported by McCabe and Ricciadelli (2001).

Another focus of some studies is the perspective of an individual when it comes to body image. When it comes to women and their perspective of their own body image, three theories are at work: the social comparison theory, the cultivation theory, and the self-schema theory (Serdar, 2005). These theories explain how women see or perceive their own appearance.

Lastly, other studies deal with portraval and representation of models in the different forms of media. Blaha (2006)examined four magazines, namely InStyle, Glamour, Fitness, and Good Housekeeping. She examined the women in the different advertisements present in each of the magazines and analyzed its theme. She found that magazines such as Good Housekeeping is geared towards older females and portrays women in a less sexualized manner, unlike InStyle and Glamour, which are geared towards females. younger In magazines such as Sports Illustrated, females lack representation compared males. and when they to are represented, they are usually in a socially acceptable or non-active situation (Shaller, 2006). In general, how men and women are portrayed increase the normative standards of thinness – men as to having standard weight and women as to being extremely thin (Poorani, 2012).

Most of the studies, as said, deal with the effects, portravals, perceptions and representations of body image of different factors, but media is considered as the most influential to how individuals perceive the ideal body image. The researchers would be focusing on the representations of models (male and female) based on the reviews of The Naked Truth. Some studies either focused on the males or the females (e.g. Manasia, 2002; Serdar, 2005; Blaha ,2006; Huebscher, 2010). although some tackled both the male and the female (e.g. McCabe & Ricciadelli. 2001; Shaller. 2006;Poorani, 2012). More specifically, the researchers would be focusing on the descriptive language present in the reviews. Other studies focused on how models are represented in photos, and advertisements videos. (e.g. Blaha, 2006; Poorani, 2012). And more importantly, the study will be discussing the portravals of the masses, not the media. Most studies discussed and focused on the media and its representation of models. The media in this study is set as the medium of representation of the masses (e.g. articles, blogs, tweets, instagram posts).

1.3 Statement of the Problem

The main purpose of this paper is to investigate how models (male and female) are presented based on the descriptive language present in the reviews of The Naked Truth. Specifically, the researchers would like to investigate the following:

- 1. What were the reactions and feedback of the viewers of the naked truth?
  - 2. What are the patterns of the descriptive language found in the reviews?
  - 3. How many descriptive language were directed at the models of the fashion show?

1.4 Theoretical Framework

researchers' For the theoretical framework, they will be using the influence of media that was used in the study of Dimson, Laconico, and Rosales (1999), where they found that media affects body image satisfaction of males using its peripheral route of persuasion. Additionally, the researchers would also be using media exposure used in the study of Frias, Go, and Hong (2005), where they found and emphasized that media is a big factor in influencing a woman's body image perception. Finally the researchers would alos be using the media representations theory of Wykes and Gunter (2005), where it states that representations in the media affect an individual's perception on body image.

2 METHODOLOGY

2.1 Corpus of the Study

The corpus of this study was obtained from Twitter, Instagram, and articles or blogs. For twitter, tweets were collected through searching the key words: "The Naked Truth Bench." The tweets collected were tweets posted since "The Naked Truth" fashion show was held, which was on September 20, 2014. The tweets came from random people as long as the tweets were about The Naked Truth. As for Instagram, all Instagram posts still related to The Naked Truth were collected. Instagram posts were searched through the hash tag search bar: "#thenakedtruthbench." Like the users from Twitter, the Instagram posts came from random people with Instagram accounts, as long as their posts were about The Naked Truth. Lastly, for the articles and blogs, the web was used as a resource. The researchers encoded "The Naked Truth" on the search bar of a particular search engine. and collected/archived all articles and blogs related to or about The Naked Truth. All articles and blogs that were collected were written after The Naked Truth was held. The articles and blogs came from random authors as long as the topic of their works focused on The Naked Truth.

2.2 Procedure

2.2.1 Corpus of the Study

For the corpus of the study, the researchers made use of Twitter. Instagram, and articles or blogs that pertained to. referred to. or acknowledged The Naked Truth. For Twitter, the researchers typed the key words "the naked truth bench" in the Twitter search bar. All tweets about The Naked Truth after it was held were collected and were separated and categorized into two sections: tweets about The Naked Truth with descriptive language and tweets without descriptive language. For Instagram, the researchers used the mobile version of the application, and searched the hash tag "#thenakedtruthbench." It must be noted that Instagram is an application that utilizes photos. The Instagram posts found by the researchers were collected, but only the captions of the posts, meaning the photos were excluded. Like the tweets that were collected, Instagram posts were also separated and categorized into two sections (Instagram posts with and without descriptive language). For the articles and blogs, all those written after The Naked Truth was held were collected and placed in a folder. The researchers evaluated if descriptive language were present in the articles and blogs, and analyzed the pattern of these descriptive language (whether it was placed before the following words: male, female, boy, girl, man, woman; if it was placed before a particular person; or if it was placed anywhere in the sentence).

Table 2.2.1a. Number of tweets, Instagram posts, and blogs or artic	eles
---	------

Tweets	2291 tweets
Instagram Posts	183 instagram posts
Blogs or Articles	12 (approx. 2000 words each)

The table represents the number of tweets, instagram posts, and blogs or articles that were archived and were collected for the corpus of the study. After gathering, results showed a total of 2291 tweets, 183 instagram posts, and 12 blogs or articles that approximately have 2000 words each. The low number of Instagram posts is quite staggering, given the fact that Instagram, together with Twitter, are considered two of the most widely used social networking applications or sites (in the case of Twitter).

Relatively, the number of tweets, instagram posts, and blogs or articles indicates the number of people who are aware or who have watched The Naked Truth fashion show. This claim is to be proven later on in this chapter.

3 Results & Discussion

3.1 The reaction and feedback of the viewers about Bench's The Naked Truth.

A. Tweets	Number
Reactions about the fashion show	701
About the models	836
Just mentioning the fashion show	1422
Instructing to watch the fashion show	132
In another language	61
B. Instagram Posts	Number
Reactions about the fashion show	26
About the models	136
Just mentioning the fashion show	18
Instructing to watch the fashion show	2
In another language	1

Table 3.1a. Frequency table on the type or nature of tweets and of Instagram posts

The table shows the frequency table for the nature of the gathered tweets and Instagram posts. The nature of both data were divided into five (5) sections: whether the tweets or the Instagram posts were a.) reactions about the fashion show; b.) about the models; c.) just mentioning the fashion show; d.) instructing to watch the fashion show; e.) in another language. For the tweets the highest number of tweets were found to be under the category of "just mentioning the fashion show" (1422), and the lowest number being "in another language" (62). It is not astonishing that the category for "just mentioning the fashion show" had the highest amount of tweets, the same goes with the "reactions about the fashion show" and "about the models" categories. Both of which had 701 and 836 tweets respectively. The researchers had already assumed that most tweets would be about the aforementioned categories.

For the Instagram posts, the highest number was found to be under the category of "about the models" (136), and the lowest number being "in another language" (1). Like the tweets, the posts found under the "reactions about the fashion show" and "about the models" categories are not astonishing since the researchers expected this outcome, as mentioned earlier.

TOTAL: 1100 TOTAL: 310 TOTAL: 2156					portrayal of women
	TOTAL:	1100	TOTAL:	310	TOTAL :	2156

The table represents the number of English one-word comments and the number of English phrases found in the tweets about Bench's The Naked Truth. A total of 1100 one-word comments and phrases were found under the positive category, 310 under the negative category, and 2156 under the neutral category.

The number of negative one-word comments and phrases is quite staggering since the researchers assumed that most people felt indifference toward the fashion show because of its elements. As it turns out, a greater number of people felt positive or neutral about the show rather than negative based on the one-word comments and phrases that were found.

TOTAL:	313	TOTAL:	184	TOTAL:	350

The table represents the number of Tagalog one-word comments and Tagalog phrases found in the tweets about Bench's The Naked Truth. For the Tagalog tweets, a total of 313 one-word comments and phrases were found uner the positive category, 184 under the negative category, and 350 under the neutral category.

Once again, it is quite astonishing that the number of positive abd neutral tweets surpass the number of negative tweets, since as mentioned, the researchers assumed that most of the tweets about the fashion show would be negative.

The table represents the number of sentences found in the blogs and articles that were about Bench's The Naked Truth. A total of 606 English and 26 Tagalog sentences were found under the positive category, 334 English and 14 Tagalog sentences under the negative category, and 307 English and 11 Tagalog sentences were found under neutral.

The number of positive and neutral tweets is quite staggering, given the fact that the researchers assumed that most of the blogs and articles about the fashion show talked about the negative aspects of the show.

In general, the number of English one-word comments and English phrases is far greater than the number of Tagalog one-word comments and Tagalog phrases. Also, the number of positive and neutral one-word comments and phrases is greater than the number of negative one-word comments and phrases. 3.2 The patterns of the descriptive language found in the reviews.

4 Conclusion

This study aimed to know the general feeback of the masses regarding Bench's The Naked Truth fashion show.

Following the previous statement, the researchers would like to point out that the findings of this study are in opposition with the theory introduced by Wkyes and Gunter (2005)that is the media representions theory. The theory states that the different representations in the media affect the perceptions of an individual when it comes to body image. However, the findings of this study suggest that these representations clearly do not affect an individual's perceptions, in the context of The Naked Truth that is. It should be noted that the tweets and Instagram posts that were used in this study were from users who watched the airing of the fashion show on a particular ty station, and analysis of the tweets and posts suggest that these users knew about the behind the controversy aforementioned fashion show.

After further analysis and categorization of the tweets. Instagram posts and the blogs or articles, the researchers found that there are more positive and more neutral tweets, Instagram posts and blogs or articles than the negative ones. Relatively, there are more English tweets, Instagram posts and blogs or articles than Tagalog ones.

In conclusion, the representations brought about by the media regarding The Naked Truth clearly did not affect the perception of the masses regarding the show.

Lastly, the researchers also aimed to find the descriptive language that were aimed or were pertaining to the models of The Naked Truth. The findings suggest that more positive tweets, Instagram posts and blogs or articles were aimed at the models rather than the negative ones. Also, the female models received more positive tweets than the males - in other words, the female models were represented more positively than the males. This is in opposition with Shaller's (2006) study on the under representation of female athletes in Sports Illustrated, where she found that male atheletes were represented more than the female athletes.

All in all, the findings suggest that the general public have a positive disposition regarding Bench's The Naked Truth fashion show, as opposed to the negative responses it has received ever since the show was held. However, this study focused more on the feedback of the people who only watched the airing of the show on television – meaning it was already altered to fit the standards of Filipino television. The researchers suggest that if future investigation is to be done regarding the feedback of the general public about The Naked Truth, the study should focus on the people who were actually present at the event.
