CCS PROJECT BAGS 2019 VISRISK CHALLENGE GRAND PRIZE

A PROJECT BY TWO COLLEGE OF COMPUTER STUDIES ASSISTANT PROFESSORS, BRIANE PAUL SAMSON AND UNISSE CHUA, won the top prize of 2019 VisRisk Challenge hosted by the World Bank Group recently.

A disaster data and map design competition, VizRisk Challenge invited participants to explore the use of interactive mapping tools to effectively communicate risk, especially to those who are or might be exposed to hazards. Using hazard data from partner locations, participants were asked to find insights from data, design a custom map, build an interactive visualization for effective communication, and blog about the whole process.

Titled Riesgo, the project of Samson and Chua focused on Marikina City. The proponents created a data story on the suitability of Marikina's evacuation centers during severe flooding. They envisioned a worst case flooding scenario and assessed what shelters might be inundated and their accessibility to the residents.

Riesgo also won the Best Interaction Design Category Award.

As winner of the challenge, Riesgo will be showcased at the 2020 Understanding Risk Forum in Singapore.
